

Today I was proud to congratulate an impressive young constituent. Dan Klein, a student at St. Viator High School in Arlington Heights, set out to help tsunami victims with modest goals. Dan took $300 dollars of his own money and, with a little help from his parents, ordered 1,000 red rubber bracelets—all carrying the message “Students for Relief.” To date he has sold more than 450,000 bracelets, raising more than $500,000 for tsunami victims. Dan is a role model for his peers and a true inspiration for all of us in the 10th District.
